These apartments, known as "The Oaks", are described by the University as an "individually designed environment that nurtures community experience". The architects are also commended for providing a "positive living/learning environment" by creating a space which encourages a strong sense of community. The Oaks house 271 co-ed students in six two-story buildings with double and triple occupancy apartments. Each floor is equipped with a lounge, study room, laundry room and TV room to provide small groups of students with communal space.
